NOW FOR THREE DAYS

The Producers were idle yester-day as a result of the heavy rain of Sunday night and Monday morning. The groundkeeper, with morning. The groundkeeper, with several assistants, worked at the park Monday morning but decided that the infield would be unfit for use and notified owner Purpus to that affect. The latter then called the game off, Paris and Tuisa open a three-game series this afternoon, A doubte-header will be played Wednesday owing to the fact that the weather man prevented Monday's tangle. Several new players are scheduled to make their debut with the Producers this afternoon and a large crowd is expected de-

"Firebrand" Johnny Evers, Baseball's Greatest Product, Says Goodbye to Game He Has Done so Much to Make

Johnny Evers, the "Firebrand" of the National league and the greatest individual force in baseball, will retire from baseball forever, at the close of the series with St. Louis Wednesday. Why?
Here is his own statement:
"I am tired of building concrete grandstands and filling them with fans for baseball mag-crete grandstands and filling them with fans for baseball magnates who are not only unappreciate but who have gone out of thir way to harrass me.'

If Evers lives up to his announcement, baseball will lose one of its greatest characters. The second-sucker is without a poer, not only in the mechanical points of the game, but in the finer issues as well.

False impressions of Evers have spread over wide areas like a conflagration or a blight or an epidemic. Some word-painters would have you think he is a baseball Caligula. The true Evers is a chap of rugged personality, grim determination and remarkable foresight. Those who know him intimately have never ceased to wonder at his apnasing and tireless energy. He loves baseball, not for the golden harvest he gleans, but because of the game itself.

has to employ his gall to trans-form the seas into ink with which form the seas into ink with which to chronicle his greatness. Evers plays the kind of baseball the fans fancy. He is hustling and fighting every minute. It is nonsense to say that people do not like scrappy ball.

Evers is a human flame. He is loved and hated; trusted and feared; full of the steam and red-hot conviction of warmth and frost of instructive personalty.

He is just a package and parcel of courage. The thrones of the old world, the courts of the universe, the governments of men may fall and crumple to ruin, the sun may shine at midnight, the may fall and crumple to ruin, the sun may shine at midnight, the moon at midday, the flowers may lose their odors and trees shed no leaves, damned spirits may swap hell for heaven with the angels or light—but courage never changes. It always wins. It is to be lioped that John Evers will reconsider his statement that he is through with baseball; the grand old game needs him, needs him because he is out there fighting every minute and because he is one of the greatest bulwarks which America's favorite sport has ever possessed.
